INT. HOTEL BALLROOM - NIGHT

A wedding DJ gets ready to introduce the bride and groom.

WEDDING DJ

Ladies and gentlemen, distinguished guests, those who have traveled from afar and those who haven't, the moment has come that all of you have been waiting for. I have just received word that our newly married couple is waiting outside the ballroom at this very moment. So now, if you will, please direct your attention to the main entrance, just below the ivy-covered trestle, to the left of the lovely ice swan sculpture. (couple enters) It is my pleasure and distinct honor, to present to you, for the very first time: Mr. and Mrs. Dan and Phyllis Airhart!

The crowd is shocked. People gasp. The DJ got the bride's name wrong.

WEDDING DJ

I mean Mr. and Mrs. Dan and Stephanie Airhart!

There is a long, uncomfortable pause.

WEDDING DJ

Oh I don't believe it. I can't believe I just did that. I am terribly sorry. I'm so sorry. How could I mess up your name? I can't believe I just did that to your wedding. I hope everything isn't ruined from my slipup. But I guess it is since this is what people are going to remember. I have tainted your wedding day, Dan and Stephanie, and I couldn't possibly express to you how horrible I feel. I will completely understand if you forgo tipping me. I don't deserve a tip now. Not since I am now responsible for a painful memory. I only ask you to not hold Sonic Boom DJs responsible. This was my fault. Let's try to move on from this painfully awkward experience before it gets imbedded any deeper into our subconscious - though it's probably too late. (with forced cheerfulness) It is time for the celebrated first dance between the bride and the groom. Would everyone please direct your attention to the center of the ballroom as Dan and Stephanie take the dance floor for their first dance as husband and wife.

The DJ plays Unforgettable. Couple dances. Song plays for about 15 seconds before DJ picks up the mic.

(slaps the top of his head) Ah! I know where Phyllis came from.
That was the name of my first girlfriend, which believe it or not, wasn't until college. I was a bit of a late-bloomer; didn't really take to girls until my freshman year. That is strange because Stephanie, today's special bride, looks nothing like Phyllis, believe me! Stephanie here is a far more attractive woman. Not so much in the face as in the body. Phyllis had kind of a weird pear shape to her. Her unusual form appealed to me at first, but after time, I desired a more conventionally appealing body type, like Stephanie here. Our bride has one of those perfectly athletic yet curvy bodies that's impossible to look away from. Looks great in her dress doesn't she folks? And Dan and Stephanie look great together don't they? (pause) What's funny about my relationship with Phyllis is that I don't remember her so much as I remember her dog. She had this massive black and white spotted Great Dane named Josh. And let me tell you, this dog was huge.
Probably the biggest dog I have ever seen. I thought he had to be a pony or some breed of small horse when I first laid eyes on him. I thought about riding him a lot, though I never tried it. Apparently Josh had a bad back. When he was a puppy -- and based on the pictures I saw that was the only time he looked like a normal dog -- some kid ran over him with a Big Wheel. (pause) What a happy couple, Dan and Stephanie are. I'm glad they seem to have forgiven me for my terrible faux pas. But really, isn't getting married all about forgiveness? (pause) On the subject of forgiveness, sometimes I have wondered whether Josh ever forgave the little boy who ran over him. Of course, he probably never saw this kid again. (pause) Then there's the question of whether a dog has enough sentience to forgive. And how could a dog communicate the fact that he had forgiven you? Maybe there are ways. I'm not a pet owner. (long pause) Speaking of forgiveness, I just remembered something else from my relationship with Phyllis: I cheated on her. And I don't think she ever forgave me. But judging by the reaction of our bride and groom to my name debacle, it looks like they are in for a life of forgiving each other. A round of applause for the newly married couple! And now, ladies and gentlemen, I believe it is time for the cake-cutting ceremony. And boy oh boy, does that cake look delicious. Wouldn't it be horrible if someone fell on that gorgeous cake? Makes me think of my 11th birthday when I did just that. My mom had constructed a cake in the shape of a soccer ball...
